Student Fee Review Board to open up applications for FY 2019-2020

ALBUQUERQUE – The UNM Student Fee Review Board (SFRB) will open applications for the FY 2019-2020 budget recommendation process on July 19th. UNM departments seeking to receive funding from student fees are encouraged to submit all necessary forms before the September 7th deadline.

SFRB is made up of undergraduate and graduate student representatives who help decide how over $12 million of student fees are allocated across the university. An interview and application process determined the representatives to the board. This year, ASUNM President Becka Myers will serve as the Chair, with GPSA Boney Mutabazi serving as Vice-Chair. UNM students are always encouraged to attend forums, deliberations, and other hearings to make their voice heard as to where their student activity fees go. During last year's process, over 30 units within the university applied for program funding through the SFRB process.
